March 1674

LIF THE AMOROUS OLD WOMAN; or, 'Tis Well if it Take. [The author is not known, but the play has been attributed to Thomas Duffett.] Edition of 1674: Prologue spoken by Major Mohun. A second Prologue intended, but not spoken. Honorio - Lydal; Amante - Beeston; Garbato - Eastland; Cicco - Perin; Riccamare - Coysh; Buggio - Chapman; Furfante - Powel; Sanco-panco - Shirly; Constantia - Mrs Cox; Arabella - Mrs James; Clara - Mrs Boutel; Strega - Mrs Corey. Epilogue.

COMMENT. The King's Company. The date of the premiere is not known, but, as the play was entered in the Term Catalogues, May 1674, a first production not later than March 1674 is likely. In addition, the relatively large number of minor actors suggests that it might be a Lenten performance by the young players of the company. As to the authorship, the title page states: Written by a Person of Honour. On the other hand, Langbaine (English Dramatick Poets, p. 526) reports that he had heard that it was written by Duffett. The second Prologue is in Covent Garden Drollery, 1673, but the fact that it was intended but not spoken does not assist in dating the first performance.

LIF THE MISTAKEN HUSBAND. [The author is not known, but the Preface suggests that one scene was written by John Dryden.] Edition of 1675: The Prologue. No actors' names. The Epilogue.

COMMENT. The King's Company. The date of the premiere is not known, but John Harold Wilson, "Six Restoration Play-Dates," Notes and Queries, June 1962, p. 221, has argued, primarily on references in the Epilogue, that the play was probably produced before the opening of the new Theatre Royal in Drury Lane and following two unsuccessful plays: The Mall and The Amorous Old Woman. The Prologue is in New Songs and Poems a la Mode, 1677. Preface to the edition of 1675: This play was left in Mr Dryden's hands many years since. The Author of it was unknown to him, and return'd not to claim it.
