COMMENT. [In mainpiece the playbill retains Aickin and Miss De Camp, but "This was a singularly disastrous evening. Mrs Gibbs read Miss De Camp's character . . . Aickin was taken suddenly ill after the first act, and the remainder of his part was read by Davenport." In afterpiece "Palmer, having gone through a scene of the Guardian, made an apology to the audience, and read the remainder of Heartly" (Monthly Mirror, Sept. 1797, p. 182). Miss Stuart was from DL.]
